Let's look at some examples of how the new technology can work: Refereeing In FIFA 22, players will more confidently receive yellow cards than ever before, giving you even more control to effectively manage the match in the final 10 minutes. Football matches are often won or lost in the last 10 minutes, and FIFA 22 ensures an even and more accurate refereeing experience with new and improved tools. For example, you will now have full access to the data referees collect from player movements to help identify specific fouls, review borderline decisions and even provide critical points of advice for the fourth official. FIFA Ultimate Team FIFA Ultimate Team is a new feature of FIFA 22 that will provide real-time recommendations for players, particularly in the final stages of a match. Using the existing FUT card data from Ultimate Team and the data from the in-game match you can now recommend key player cards that will improve any team. Passing New features are introduced with this very core of the game. The new demo shows the game giving you clear feedback on your passes. To give you even more control over your passes, FIFA 22 introduces some new skills and passing techniques. For example, you can now change a pass by using a dribble instead of looking at the next man: this gives you the ability to play a pass off the heel of the foot and create space. Or you can use the ball to push forward and with a "Cross" pass, play a short pass and combine with the next teammate. Boosting Boosting, an important feature of the game, has been enhanced with game logic improvements and visual improvements. Boosting consists of breaking free from a defender and then be able to create space by using your players' abilities to finish through balls or by using your pace to outrun defenders. Rotation FIFA 22 makes use of the face tracking technology introduced in FIFA 17. This tracking system monitors player movement across the pitch, and rotates the camera on the player's body to ensure that players are always visible in-game. For example, when a player makes a throw-in they automatically align the player in the direction of the throw-in and keep their position relative to the centre-line. This gives you perfect vision of the throw-in and the action around them. Live Action Cameras
