Although it was designed for professional users, Photoshop is a versatile image manipulation program and is used by many photo-editing novices to adjust images and photos for a variety of purposes, including professional photography, Internet web pages, and print publications. Editing with the Layers Panel In the Layers panel you can view and manage the layers in your image. Generally, you use the Layers panel to manage the individual components of your images — for example, by adjusting colors, contrast, or tone — as well as to create and place layers on top of one another. Use the Layers panel for the following purposes:

Creating a custom shape: Creating a custom shape is a bit like drawing freehand. As long as you select the shape, it's a geometric object. You can make text appear on the shape with the Type and Shape Tools. Figure 9-6 shows examples of shapes you can create. Using layer masks: Adding a mask to a layer creates areas where you cut away the layer. See the sidebar "Applying layer masks" for more information. Easily changing the contents of individual layers: You can move, rotate, scale, and otherwise alter the contents of individual layers. Layers overlap, so you can add or delete them as needed. Figure 9-6: Use the Layer panel to create and apply layer masks to make your shapes. You can use the following methods to add or remove layers from an image: Click the Add Layer icon, shown in the margin. This icon looks like a set of stacked layers in a box, as shown in Figure 9-7. When you click this icon, a new layer is created. You can also choose Image⇒Layer⇒Add New Layer or press Ctrl+J (⌘-J). Figure 9-7: Click the icon (refer to the left) to create a new layer. You can also create a new layer using the New Layer dialog box, which is covered in detail later in this chapter. Or you can open the Layers panel (refer to Figure 9-1). Double-click the existing layer name or press Delete to delete the current layer. To rename the current layer, click the Layer Name column header and enter a new name in the highlighted field. Creating a layer You can create a new layer by following these steps: 1

The Pen Tool lets you draw fine lines, curves, and even objects using computer mouse. This is an essential tool when it comes to retouching images and creating drawings. Here's a basic list of icons that appear within menus and windows of the Photoshop program: Brush or Pen Tool () Draw a selection around an area of a photo. The Brush can then be used to paint on the photo or create a new one. Clone Stamp () Allows you to make a copy of an existing area of an image. This is good for retouching images and duplicating sections of an image. Crop () Allows you to adjust the size of a photo. Fill () Used to fill a transparent area with color. Find () Allows you to search a photo for specific types of content. Hair and Beard () Allows you to create an outline around an area in a photo. This can be used to make it easier to create a background for a photo, or to separate items in a photo. Highlight () Allows you to make a selection of any area of a photo, even a shape. This is useful when cropping a photo so you can place the photo in a specific location. Lasso () Selects a closed shape, such as an entire object or a line or curve that is anywhere in a photo. This can be used for erasing areas of a photo. Magic Wand () Selects a closed or open shape, or areas of an image that you can then fill and/or crop. This is one of the most-used tools in editing an image. Move () Allows you to move or copy an image or a layer. You may also be able to copy and move images or layers using tools from other programs, such as moving or copying a photo from a browser to Photoshop. Opaque () Allows you to make a selection of an area of a photo. The opacity slider allows you to make the selection transparent or opaque. Path () Allows you to create a selection path or closed shape to be filled, copied, or moved. Paint Bucket () Allows you to paint with color on a photo. Pen Tool () Allows you to draw fine lines, curves, and shapes. This is used in retouching an image, creating a drawing or illustration, or creating a 3D effect. Paint Bucket

A joint state-local task force is developing a plan to solve a looming water crisis in Nashua after final adoption of an emergency declaration by the city council. Since the release of an emergency declaration for the city and Nashua Public Water District in October, the task force has been working on establishing its base for a solution and the best course of action. Although much of the work has been done as of Friday, the task force said the work still needed to be done to finalize the plan. A number of tough decisions still needed to be made, including the plan to tap into backup water reserves if the piping system at municipal wells no longer feeds the water system. But this means that the task force is planning to access the city's reserve water supplies and the pump station at the Middleton Waterworks as soon as this summer. The group is also looking at the need for major changes to the city's and NPD's 20-year contracts, including any change to the city's water supply system to better address leaks and the increase in the city's water demand during years with hot summers. Also, the group is looking at ways to reduce the cost of water for customers. "The answer is going to come in parts," said City Councilor Pat Long, chairman of the task force. "One of the major things is going to be how do we move away from our contract and our 20-year plan? We're going to have to look at that very closely." NPD General Manager Jackie McGowan said no one knows yet exactly what the tasks force will be asked to address, but said the group's responsibilities could include conducting a new audit of the city's contract with

NPD, reviewing the costs of the city and NPD's 20-year water supply plan, and considering improvements to the city's water system. McGowan said the city will most likely have to put money into the city's water system at some point, although exactly how much is still to be determined. "You never know how much money is going to have to be put into the infrastructure," she said, adding that it could be a small amount or a major one. The group is also looking at the state's capital improvement program and has developed a small percentage on where additional funding could
