The final version of the PC Speech Recognition consists of three main parts: The Speech Recognition itself; the voice banking; and the automatic speech recognition (ASR) engine which is built into the Nuance Dragon NaturallySpeaking (<https://www.nugatek.com/>). For the currently available drivers for the PC Speech Recognition, have a look at the Downloads section on the Nuance site. All three parts can be installed separately, but to run the Speech Recognition and for the voice banking, it is also required to install the so called Nuance Application Toolkit (<https://www.nugatek.com/artk/>) which can be downloaded from the Nuance site. For the Nuance Application Toolkit, there are currently no separate Windows, Mac or Linux versions but a single application package which can also be downloaded from the Nuance site.
